Interview with Manu Smadja

Manu Smadja

Co-Founder &
Chief Executive Officer

Manu Smadja is the co-founder and CEO of MPOWER Financing. Prior to founding MPOWER, Manu was an Engagement Manager at McKinsey & Company, where he focused on Global Financial Inclusion and U.S. mass-market banking. Before McKinsey & Company, he held various positions at CapitalOne and Vistaprint. Manu has an M.B.A. from INSEAD, along with an M.S. in Systems & Information Engineering and a B.S. in Computer Science from the University of Virginia. In his free time, Manu enjoys playing soccer or kayaking.

1. What was the inspiration behind founding MPOWER Financing?

Both my co-founder, Mike Davis, and I, faced financial challenges during college and graduate school. We're passionate about removing financial obstacles for promising students across the globe so they can access and complete their education.

2. What problems are you seeing in the student lending space and how is MPOWER fixing them?

International students seeking a U.S. university degree have traditionally been ignored by banks. Until the arrival of MPOWER, they had to borrow using collateral or a U.S.-based co-signer, both of which are considerable hurdles for these students. Using our proprietary forward-looking credit algorithms, we can extend loans to this highly valuable customer segment and enable them to pursue a top US education.

3. What are the advantages and challenges of lending to a specific segment of the market such as international students? How large is your target market?

The advantage for MPOWER is that this is an untapped $36 bn a year market with double-digit growth. We have a first mover advantage and are well positioned to capture a significant market share quickly. The challenges were to create the right marketing & sales channels, establish global servicing & collections operations and develop an innovative credit model leveraging U.S. and overseas data. We've accomplished all three over the past few years and are now executing on what we've built.

4. How does MPOWER acquire its international student customer base?

We partner with universities to make their current and prospective international students aware of MPOWER's student loans designed specifically for them. In addition, we have a large range of marketing partnerships, both in the U.S. as well as overseas, to reach prospective international students.

5. How difficult is this market to enter? How are you integrated with colleges / universities?

We're generally the only U.S. loan option for international students. This is not an easy market to enter due the operational and risk complexities, which is why we're quickly capturing a large share of this market. Our partnerships with top colleges and universities makes it easy for international students to find our student loan offering.

Exclusive CEO Interview – Manu Smadja

6. What products / services does MPOWER currently offer? What is on the road map for 2018 and beyond?

Currently we offer 10-year, fixed-rate loans ranging from $2,000 to $50,000. We plan on expanding this offer to other countries where education is costly and international students have few or no financing options. In addition, we plan on developing a refi product as well as expand our range of services to international students to help them succeed not only in school but also in their subsequent career.

7. What differentiates MPOWER from other student lenders?

The other U.S.-based banks and lenders require a U.S.-based co-signer, which most international students don't have. Local lenders tend to charge higher interest rates and often require collateral. MPOWER removes these barriers and offers a fixed-rate loan that makes budgeting and repayment easy. In addition, we disburse funds directly to the university, we build students' credit history, and we make it seamless for students to pay us back regardless of where in the world they are located.

8. How are you funding your loans?

We fund loans through SPVs funded by asset management companies, credit funds, and other institutional investors. We have a line of sight to over $100 mm in loan capital. At the company level, we're also backed by nearly $10 mm of equity from venture capital firms, investment firms, and family offices including Zephyr, Village Capital, VARIV, Goal Structured Solutions, Fresco, 1776, Dreamit, Chilango Ventures, and University Ventures.

Exclusive CEO Interview – Manu Smadja

9. Can you discuss your economic model including customer acquisition costs and lifetime value metrics? What are you seeing in terms of loss rates?

Our customer acquisition costs are relatively low due to our partnerships with over 250 top universities and strong word-of-mouth and social media marketing. We have had minimal defaults to date and expect that our default rates going forward will be extremely low. Because our structure requires smaller payments while the student is in school, we have been able to accumulate thousands of repayment data points.

10. Can you discuss your long-term growth potential and funding plans for the Company?

At this stage we're barely scratching the surface of our target market and we plan on more than doubling our YoY loan volume in 2018. A growing market share of a relatively untapped U.S. market, combined with expansions to other countries and products represent huge growth potential for MPOWER.

11. What are the biggest challenges you face running a fast growing FinTech company?

Growing at 23% MoM means the organization is constantly stretched and looking for the right resources and partners: top talent to join our team, marketing and servicing partners to support our growth, and low-cost capital to deploy.
